

ABSTRACT

An automatic musical performance system stores musical data such as performance patterns and pattern sequences. During performance, the user provides input indicating tones to be added to or deleted from the musical performance, and the stored musical data is updated in accordance with the user input by adding or deleting the specified tones from the performance at the locations within the performance at which the user input for each tone was received.